They stated that India, being the most populous country, faces a significant problem of unemployment. Over the years, the Government has implemented

	various policy initiatives aimed at generating employment opportunities and improve the skills of its youth. This paper examined the outline of the schemes launched under the ‘employment and skilling’ priority in the Union Budget 2024-25. It also analyzed the objectives of the schemes and their limitations. The paper determined the correlation between the allocation of funds for skill development and the youth unemployment rates. The findings concluded that there is a relation between the allocation of funds for skill development and youth unemployment rates in India, also recommending further detailed research into specific areas of these schemes. 22 students of FYBA and 10 students of SYBA students attended the session.
