Report	The Department of Konkani at St. Xavier's College, Mapusa, organized an insightful field visit for the Third Year Bachelor of Arts (TYBA) Konkani students to the news studio of Voice For Goem. Organized as a practical extension of their core syllabus in Electronic Journalism, the primary objective of this visit was to bridge the gap between classroom theory and real-world media operations, providing students with direct exposure to news broadcasting, reporting techniques, and studio workflows. Upon arrival at the studio, the students were warmly welcomed by the technical and editorial teams of Voice For Goem. The visit commenced with an orientation session detailing the foundational mechanics of broadcast news production. Media professionals walked the students through the entire lifecycle of a news segment; from gathering leads and field reporting to scriptwriting, teleprompting, news anchoring, and post-production video editing. The visit was coordinated by Dr. Fr. Luis Gomes and Ms. Ankita Zambaulikar faculty members of the Dept. The highlight of the field trip was the immersive, hands-on experiential session. Students were given the unique opportunity to step into the shoes of broadcast journalists, news anchors, and camera crew. Under the direct supervision of experienced journalists, students practiced news delivery using professional teleprompters, gained an understanding of framing shots and camera angles, and learned the nuances of voice modulation required for broadcast reporting. Furthermore, the studio staff demonstrated the real-time editing and audio-mixing processes, highlighting how live feeds and pre-recorded news stories are curated into cohesive news bulletins. An interactive Q&A session followed, during which students engaged eagerly with the media personnel. They asked insightful questions about news verification, the challenges of live breaking-news reporting, ethical considerations in digital journalism, and career opportunities within Konkani electronic media. The professionals emphasized the growing importance of the Konkani language in contemporary digital and broadcast journalism, encouraging students to leverage their linguistic and analytical skills for media careers.
