Report	On 28th September 2026, the TYBBA General students undertook an industrial visit to John Paul Distillery, Cuncolim, as part of their academic learning experience. The visit began with a presentation in the Audio-Visual Room, providing insights into the brand, whisky-making process, and different varieties of whisky produced by the company. The students then toured the distillery, observing the machinery and various stages of production. They learned about peated and unpeated barley, explored the art of identifying whisky notes through smelling, and visited the barrel storage area.

	The students also gained knowledge about the differences between Indian and Scottish whiskies, particularly the influence of climatic conditions on the ageing process, along with special limited-edition whiskies. The visit concluded with lunch and the return journey . Overall, it was an enriching experience that connected classroom learning with practical industrial knowledge
